verse one:

Everybody take your places, please.

Welcome to the world debut of “The Magic Dancing Trees.”

Under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. Chance,
The kids came up with a story full of wonderment and dance.

chorus one:

The Sycamores, Amira, Sam, Jamal, and Nell,
Go up and down, like ponies on a carousel,
And everything is going kinda sorta well
Till it becomes the Giggle and Burp Ballet.

verse two:

Someone's mom had messed up, now we know.
She made a stop for bubbly pop and brought it to the show.

She was only bein’ nice and didn't think it through,
And now we're watching a dozen kids all full of CO².

chorus two:

A hickory does something that is unrehearsed.
A belch escapes, and trust me, it is just the first
Of many more from others as their bellies burst
With laughter in the Giggle and Burp Ballet.

bridge:

Mrs. Chance attempts to hide her eyes.

“This cannot be happening,” she cries.

Oh no, much to her chagrin, all of the parents join in.

chorus three:

Well, in spite of disbelief and dropping jaws,
The room erupts in snickers, chuckles, and guffaws.
The curtain falls to wild and thunderous applause.
I guess there's really nothing left to say
But welcome to the Giggle and Burp Ballet.
