

Navigating Friendship

by Dorothy Cresswell

C                      G                                      C
Navigating friendship, oh won't you take a ride?
                                 G                                      C
Alone I'm fine, but it's more fun when you are by my side.

                 F                                      C
Some days the way is easy. We laugh and chat and joke.
                 G                                      C
Some days the way is bumpy and we argue, or we mope.
                 F                                      C
That's when we have to steer with care; take a deep breath and hang in there
                 G                                      C
Together we will ride the waves and we will make it through.

You cannot know my feelings though you may try to guess.
So it's my job to tell you so can respond your best.
And its your job to listen, pay attention when I do.
Together we will ride the waves and we will make it through.

I cannot know your feelings though I may try to guess.
So it's your job to tell me so I can respond my best.
And it's my job to listen, pay attention when you do.
Together we will ride the waves and we will make it through.