

SNAKE DANCE

Dancing in a snake dance
Where the dancer twirls and spins
And the guilty serpent strikes
And neither partner wins

I asked her how she'd been
She said, "You've been our best friend,
And I don't know where to begin,

Cho: I don't love him anymore
I've had it up to here, I've seen it all before
He won't let me help him
He hollers if I try
And I know I must be crazy
But I can't say 'Good-bye'"

She cried and poured my tea
She said "What can I do?
You see, I'm his guiding light
When I help him talk things through
But he holds me up on high
Where he guards me jealously
While he gets it on with one-night stands
He can't make love with me!

Cho: I don't love him anymore
I've had it up to here
I've seen it all before,
He scares me when he's angry
He burns me with his eyes,
And if I say 'I'm leaving'
It kills me when he cries."

I hugged her in the silence
"It'll all work out," I lied
I was hardly out her door
When I had to stop and cry
They were dancing in a snake dance
To a tune I used to know
My heart was aching now
Though it happened long ago.

They were dancing in a snake dance
That would have to run it's time
And it hurt to see them dancing
In a dance so much like mine
Where the serpent strikes
When he hears his dancer's cries
And he feels twice the pain
When his dancer finally dies!

Yes, he strikes 'cause he's afraid
Of love that's true,
And both of them are poisoned
When the dance is through.
